JAPANESE ULTIMATUM ASKING FOR COMPLETE WITHDRAWAL OF CHINESE TROOPS FROM SHANGHAI IS REJECTED

American and British Residents of Sections of International Settlements Warned to Evacuate Today—Officials Decide Delayed Big Battle is About to Break

SHANGHAI, Feb. 19.—(INS)—China rejects the Japanese ultimatum calling for complete withdrawal of Chinese troops from the Shanghai area by 5 o'clock tomorrow night (4 a. m. E. S. T.).

Gen. Tsai Ting-Kai, commander of the 19th Route Army, to whom the ultimatum was delivered by the Japanese commander, Lieut.-Gen. Kenkichi Uyeda, so informed International News Service in an interview this afternoon.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 19.—(INS)—American and British residents of the Hongken and Yangtzepoo districts of the International Settlement were warned to evacuate their homes today as consular officials decided the delayed big battle was about to break out.

Heavy fighting, in which large areas of the International Settlement are expected to be shelled, was held virtually certain to begin at least by 7 a. m. tomorrow (6 p. m. E. S. T.). Friday, the time limit set by the Japanese for Chinese military leaders to begin evacuating their front lines.

The Chinese, who were to deliver an official reply today, announced they would flatly reject the ultimatum.

American and British troops took over the front lines of the Settlement defenses from the Shanghai Volunteer Corps as the outbreak of major hostilities neared.

Both Chinese and Japanese lined up their forces for the battle, and prospects of actual plane fighting in the air, for the first time since the present trouble, loomed as it was reported a Chinese air force was ready to take the air at dawn tomorrow to help defend the Chinese positions.

Foreign observers noted with alarm that the Japanese now have abandoned the pretext of protecting the Settlement in their dealings with China, and that they now have negotiated with her as with a country with which they were at war.

To back this charge that Japan now considers herself in a state of hostilities with China, foreigners pointed out that neither the municipal council nor the foreign consuls were notified by Japan regarding yesterday's ultimatum to Chinese leaders.

In previous negotiations with China Japan has politely observed the international etiquette of the Settlement and kept representatives of all leading powers duly informed of her activities.

TOKYO, Feb. 19.—(INS)—The Foreign office announced this afternoon that Chinese forces in Shanghai are being encouraged to fire directly upon the International Settlement as a result of the reported stand of the American State Department holding Japan responsible for any loss of American life or property caused by either side as long as Japan uses the Settlement as a base for military operations.

Washington reports denied that Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson was contemplating a note to Tokyo to this effect, but the Foreign Office clung to an official dispatch from Ambassador Demichi in Washington asserting it.

Word from Shanghai of the unofficial Chinese rejection of the Japanese ultimatum to withdraw their forces 12 and one half miles northeast of the Settlement prepared Tokyo for the delayed big battle.

Regarding this the Foreign Office announced that the Japanese forces would act in Shanghai as they did at Chinchow, Tsitsihar, Anganchi, and Harbin; that is, the Japanese would drive the Chinese back, without declaring war, if they showed no signs of withdrawing by 7 a. m. Saturday, Shanghai time.

Japan will answer the League of Nations warning prepared by the council of twelve on Monday, it was announced.

WAR ZONE BULLETINS

(Copyright, 1932, by I. N. S.)

Japan will take the offensive against the Chinese 19th Army shortly after 7 a. m. tomorrow (6 p. m. Friday, eastern standard time), if Chinese troops fail to begin evacuation by that time. General Kenkichi Uyeda, commander of the Japanese troops so told International News Service today and added he would take "my own action" if the Chinese were still not obeying the ultimatum of withdrawal.

He has no intentions of waiting until the expiration of the ultimatum at 5 p. m. (4 a. m. Saturday, eastern standard time) he said.

"It is my impression," General Uyeda declared, "that the Chinese will not consent to withdraw at that time for even last night they dropped shells within the International Settlement.

"In no case will my troops take offensive moves against the Chinese army prior to 7 a. m. Saturday (6 p. m. Friday, eastern standard time), but if I still see the 19th army within its present lines I must take my own action.

"While I make no promises to restrict my military activities within the 20 kilometer zone I intend to confine myself to that area unless the Chinese force me to do otherwise.

"I have been informed that General Chiang Kai-fhek's body guards are moving nearer Shanghai but I don't know whether or not they intend enforcing the 19th route army, so long as they don't menace Shanghai, they won't come within the Japanese ultimatum."

By Dixon Hoste
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

Shanghai, Feb. 19.—Wu-Chen, Mayor of the Chinese City of Shanghai this evening flatly rejected the Japanese ultimatum calling for demilitarization at Shanghai, declaring the dispute was not for local authorities to settle but the foreign offices of the two countries. Mayor Wu refused even to transmit the ultimatum official to General Tai-Saing-Kai, commander of the 19th route army which has defended Shanghai against Japanese invasion.

In vigorous terms, Mayor Wu's reply declared that "responsibility for any further hostilities in Shanghai must rest solely with the Japanese whose troops have encroached upon Chinese territory and attacked Chinese troops."

By turning the ultimatum over to Wellington Koo, General Tsai-Ting-Kai automatically replaced it in the hands of the Chinese National Government he termed it unnecessary and ridiculous.

The General characterized the demand made on Chinese troops as absurd. He pointed out the Japanese had invaded Chinese territory and therefore have no conceivable right to order Chinese troops off their own soil.

He charged the Japanese had violated the International law by waging war against China for 22 days without a declaration of war; then handing an ultimatum to the 19th route army instead of to the national army.

GIBBONS QUIT RADIO; SMELLED THE POWDER

Famous "Headline Hunter" Was Rarin' to Go to Other Side

FIRST ON THE SCENE

(Following is the final chapter of "The story of Floyd Gibbons," world's greatest reporter who is covering the Sino-Japanese fighting for International News Service.)

By Henry Wales
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—Floyd Gibbons soared to a record altitude when he went on the air. His "headline hunters" scored an overnight hit. His talks were broadcast nationally.

With the globe as background, possessing first hand knowledge of nearly every country and people on earth, with his war experience and his long list of exploits since the armistice, Gibbons had everything the public wanted.

His delivery was the fastest that has ever been heard on the air. He has been clocked at the rate of 247 words a minute without losing clarity or expression.

Then he went into the movies. He did a series of films of big personages, General Pershing, Newton D. Baker, General Harbord. He had a dozen others lined up for the screen. About that time trouble started in Manchuria.

The veteran war-horse (although he is just past 40) smelled gunpowder. He was rarin' to go.

International News Service contracted for Gibbons' service in the Far East and he dropped the radio, the pictures, magazine articles, and books he had under way, to dash for the scene of action.

The first experienced war correspondent on the scene, he began at once to score scoops and hats over his rivals. Through the facilities placed at his disposition by General Honjo and the Japanese general staff he visited all parts of the province where action was taking place.

Trips to Nearby Washington Landmarks

By Edward W. Hoeker

Because of the bicentennial of the birth of George Washington, keen interest has been aroused in all manner of Washington landmarks. Southeastern Pennsylvania is fortunate in possessing so many of these landmarks, associated with the career of Washington in war and peace. Herewith is one of a series of twenty articles describing nearby places which are linked with the story of the Father of his country.

XI—The Perkiomen Headquarters

From the Pottsgrove region Washington began to advance his army by short steps toward the British lines in Philadelphia, for, notwithstanding the defeat at Brandywine, he contemplated giving battle again to the foe.

September 26, 1777, the army broke camp at Pottsgrove and marched to the Perkiomen Valley, halting in the vicinity of the present borough of Schwenksville.

Here, as at Pottsgrove, the claim of having been Washington's headquarters has been made for two houses, only one of which now remains. This latter is the homestead of the Pennypacker family, on the lower side of the Perkiomen, opposite Schwenksville.

Washington's correspondence does not show where he lived at this time. He dated his orders and letters "Pennypacker's Mills" or "Near Pennypacker's Mills." These mills were the chief landmark of the vicinity then, for there was no village where Schwenksville now is.

Former Governor Samuel W. Pennypacker, who was an authority on Pennsylvania history and who in his later years lived in the Pennypacker house, contended that this house was Washington's headquarters. Other historians have said that Washington lived with the family of Henry Keely, on the hills west of Schwenksville, and the preponderance of local tradition supports that version. This house was removed many years ago.

It is possible that the two stories are not irreconcilable, for the army was encamped twice in this region, the first time from September 26 to 29, and then again after the battle of Germantown, from October 4 to 8, 1777. The army retreated to this locality after being defeated at Germantown and the flight continued to the hills on the upper side of the stream, so that it is not likely the commander would have made his abode in a place so exposed as was the Pennypacker house, on the lower side of the Perkiomen. The first camp, however, was on both sides of the creek.

An old mill—not the one of Revolutionary times, however—still stands on the site of the eighteenth century grist and oil mills operated by the Pawling and Pennypacker families. A stone marker commemorating the camp is at the forks of the road near the mill. In Schwenksville Cemetery, on the western borders of the town, is a bronze tablet telling that many soldiers were buried there, having died from wounds received in the battle of Germantown.

While here Washington entered into correspondence with General Howe, the British commander, about a dog which the Americans had captured at Germantown. On the collar of the dog was the name of General Howe. Assuming it was the property of the British general, Washington had the dog returned to the British lines.

Governor Pennypacker, after buying the home of his ancestors, had the house rebuilt, and he filled it with his remarkable collection of books and antiques. The house is still the property of the Pennypacker family.

CAN'T FIND MOTIVE

Lansdale, Feb. 19.—At a loss for a motive for the strange killing of Samuel Forty, 45 year old night watchman at the Werner Foundry, here, police hope today to find clues to the murder in a mystery of a little religious cult of seven to which Forty was a member.

From the sobbing 38 year old widow of the watchman, Mrs. Josephine Forty, came the report of the cult whose purpose and ideals she had never been able to penetrate.

Forty, the father of ten children, was found hanging on an improvised gallows yesterday when employees of the factory came to work. A board had been placed across two rows of lockers in the washroom and a rope looped over it. From this the battered body of the watchman was hanging. Both legs and arms had been tied. Police added other meagre pieces of information of the secret sect.

Montgomery County officials threw the full power of the law into the effort to learn the secret cult and its members. Very little is known so far.

Ernest Gamble Plays Part In Washington News Reel

Ernest Gamble, Langhorne, well known member of the Bristol Rotary Club, portrays General Washington after the famous portrait by Stuart in the Pathe news reel, which will present the timely picture "Washington at Valley Forge," to be exhibited throughout the country for one week beginning tomorrow.

Washington's staff is composed of officers of the old military company, the State Fencibles. The Marquis de Lafayette by Captain Louis Embarger; Baron von Steuben by Captain James Francescous; General Anthony Wayne by Captain Earl du Bois; General Green by Walter Eldridge.

To make a short news reel it was necessary to spend two days at Valley Forge and two days at the Pathe Studios in New York. Enough pictures were shot to make a dozen news pictures.

NEW FOOTBALL RULES
Last season's large number of football fatalities is responsible for the national football rules committee making the most drastic changes in the rules of play in 25 years. The committee's action was taken in the full acknowledgment that fewer than 10 of the deaths were the fault of the game as played in collegiate contests and probably was prompted more by the hope of reassuring the public than in the expectation that they would eliminate all accidents.
All of the changes are definitely aimed at greater safety for the players. None of them will materially change the game from the spectator's standpoint. But they are merely rules that will be worthless unless observed by coaches and players and enforced by the field officials.
Restrictions on kick-off formations are designed to break up the wedge plays built around the run-back, which last year caused more serious accidents than any other type of play. Liberalization of substitution rules will discourage keeping injured players in the play, and further regulation of blocking tactics and use of the hands, knees and elbows by defensive players should eliminate some unnecessary roughness. There will be less knee work and piling up under the new ruling making the ball dead when the runner's body strikes the ground.
Good rules rigidly enforced will help, but the gridiron player's best safeguards are thorough training under good supervision and expert coaching.

RYGOVES
The business man or manufacturer whose hope for the future is wrapped up in an expected return to pre-war normalcy is out of luck. For pre-war normalcy never will return. That's history.
We still hear suggestions and hopes of reverting to old-time methods and the pre-war business basis, but, according to Dr. Julius Klein, of the United States Department of Commerce, such a retrogression would be about as simple as an attempt to return to the middle ages—and as profitable.
There isn't a great deal of room in business these days for Aunt Sarah, who inherited a shoe factory and insisted that the factory go on making high-laced shoes because Uncle Ezra sold 'em in the '70s. American business never was more dynamic and volatile than it is today, with a constantly changing front in practically all lines.
Since 1921, Mr. Klein points out, American business has left as monuments of its progress a long succession of junk-heaps of discarded processes, antiquated ideas and obsolete policies. There have been tragedies of those who clung too long to revered and once profitable practices.
The new business man must be eager to take advantage of the slightest changes in trend. It is no day for secrecy. Backward glances should not be longing and desirous of what is behind, but intelligently inquisitive of facts.
He who keeps too many irons in the fire gets burned.

"The GAY BANDIT of the BORDER"

by TOM GILL

COPYRIGHT 1931 BY INTERNATIONAL MAGAZINE CO., INC. — DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

For years, Paco Morales ruled the penins in Mexico with an iron hand, confiscating their lands and driving them from their homes, but the crisis has come. "El Coyote," the mysterious bandit, avenges every outrage perpetrated by Morales. The ranchers await their unknown protector's word to revolt. Morales with the aid of the U. S. Cavalry has searched for the bandit in vain. Ted Radcliffe, an American whose late father was ruined by Morales, is in love with Adela, the Spaniard's beautiful niece. Jito, Morales' ward, is jealous of Ted. Bob Harkness, Ted's friend, tells him he has plans for settling the score with Morales. While out riding, Ted and Adela lose their way and spend the night in the desert. Adela resents her uncle's suspicions. Later, Bob returns home with Ted and learns that some of his cattle were stolen. He doubts that "El Coyote" is responsible and goes with Ted to Mendoza's, a gambling resort, to investigate.

CHAPTER XXXI

"It's a kind of roadhouse, isn't it?"
"Oh, much more than that. It's a cabaret, dance hall, gambling hell, and you about which the least said is the soonest mended. It is there you can find the best-dressed and the most dangerous women of the border. It is there, too, you can find all the plain and fancy gamblers you may ever need. Jito recruits his vaqueros here. If you want anyone killed, there are a dozen men who will be ever to quote you later over at Mendoza's. Human life varies from very reasonable. Abduction is much more reasonable. Mendoza himself, the old rascal, has the best wine and the worst morals in Mexico. He has deserved killing dozens of times, but his passing will be a loss to the border. For Mendoza, in it (reminiscent of a great artist in this intricate game of life."
"Is that where the girl they call Ann Reed lives?"
"Bob's eyes were raised quickly. 'What do you know of Ann Reed?'
"Only that she is a singer over there and that she is one of the most beautiful women on the border. I remember somebody at the major's saying she had the voice of an angel with a lost soul."
"Not a gallant saying. Some kind of woman must have thought of that. Yes, it's over there that Ann Reed lives and makes men for a time forget that they're just funny, little fighting animals with brief, important lives to live. You may hear her sing, tonight." Then abruptly he asked, "Who said she had a lost soul?"
Ted laughed at the other's sudden intensity. "I've forgotten. What difference does it make?"
"None." But he added as they went to the car, "It's an uninteresting thing to say, isn't it?"
And Ted found himself wondering that Bob should resent the saying.
"Is she an American girl?" he asked, as they drove out into the night.
"To her fingertips. Yet she speaks Spanish as well as I."
"What brought her here?"
"Who can ever answer that question? Life plays one of its little jokes, and we find ourselves out here on the border. You and I, for example."
And beyond that Ted was still in ignorance as to just who Ann Reed might be when a little later they backed the car outside the tall, brightly lighted structure that had attained fame throughout the Southwest as the Palace of Mendoza. Somewhere within a band of marbles was playing Spanish airs, and beyond a half-opened door stretched a long bar, running the length of the building. The sound of popping rocks and crackling ice told them that this portion of Mendoza's at least was not unpatronized.

"Dark secrets like that," he cautioned, "deserve closed doors."

Bob leading, they entered the great glass-covered patio and walked down a long lane of tables ringed in cigarette smoke. Surrounding the patio crowded tables were scattered in the half-light about the cleared space that Mendoza held for the dancers. A babel of voices, English and Spanish, rose to greet Don Bob. Walters hurried among the tables, and everywhere Ted was conscious of the hair and shoulders of women, and of the appraising scrutiny of men. As Ted passed, several of the women raised their eyes, stopping for a moment to follow his broad shoulders. Evidently one dance-hall girl whispered to another, "There's a caballero for you," then turned wearily back to her companion.
Already both men had passed through the low adobe arch into the patio itself, where, under the ever-changing lights cast from above, two dancers were weaving a slow, sensuous tango for the pleasure of Mendoza's varied clientele. A waiter was bowing before them.
"A table for two, Señor Don Bob?" They sat down outside the circle of light, and for a time Don Bob smoked in silence.
"The man I want isn't here," he said at last. He rose, "Sit here and watch the dancing. Ted, I'll be back within the half-hour."
Musingly Bob looked at the room filled with women, whose perfume and laughter rose like a spell about them. "I leave you," he said, "among many attractive playfellows. You know these border people call Mendoza's 'the end of man's desires.' It always seemed a little misleading to me, that phrase. So cuidado."
Beyond the patio Bob turned and, mounting a narrow stairway, climbed to the upper floor, then passed down a darkened passage at the farther end of which a yellow lamp gleamed. Before a closed door he stopped and knocked.
"Quien es?" Fresh and clear a woman's voice came through the door. An eager voice, and again came the question, this time repeated in English, "Who is it?"
For answer Bob turned the knob and entered.
A girl was sitting there. White, dead-white, her face was almost too white, although it served to make still larger the great dark eyes, and to enhance the brilliance of her blue-black hair. A vivid, unforgettable face. Yet a face strangely sad, a face that seemed created for the world's happiness, but ever unable to find it. She sat before the mirror in a light peignoir, peering her lips with deep carmine.
As she looked up the gathering frown melted to a smile of quick welcome. Running to him she passed her long fingers through his hair and kissed him. A long kiss. Her slender body pressed him, while her fingers locked about his neck. She threw back her head and her very eyes caressed him. "Don Bob." The low voice was resonant with adoration. "Don Bob."
Smiling, she added, "Whom others call El Coyote."
— Holsten here
He looked quickly at him, then laid a finger on her lips.
"Dark secrets like that," he cautioned, "deserve closed doors."
"You yourself deserve a closed and bolted door." She drew him to a chair before her dressing table. "It's been days—days and days. Whenever you don't come I want to go to that ridiculous little major over in Verdi and say: 'Give me your bags of gold pesos and I'll tell you who El Coyote is. He is your leading citizen, dear major, but also he is a damned unsatisfactory lover.' Then what would your fat major do?"
"Spank you and send you back to me, I hope. If he let you escape I'd have nothing in the border country to live for."
"Strange man—as if anyone really mattered to you." Again her long white fingers pressed his cheeks. "Even I, who could easily die for you."
He smiled up at her, then abruptly rose. "When are you singing next?"
"Not for an hour—never if you will stay."
"I'd like to stay always, God knows. Here where there is peace and security and a very beautiful child to spoil me. Only—"
"Only you would get so weary of peace and security after a day or two. I know. There is a curse laid on people like you, Bobs. You never rest, you never lose yourself—even in love. Already you are glancing at that clock of mine and you haven't been here two minutes."

FLYING OVER PENNSYLVANIA SAFE

Records of Transport Companies Brand "Hell's Stretch" Conception As Myth

By SHERMAN B. ALTRICK
In New York Sun

The mountains of Pennsylvania are not a hazard to air transport; "Hell's Stretch" is just an overworked myth; fog does not come rolling in from nowhere to endanger the lives of passengers in winged Pullmans, and a trip along the skyways across the Keystone State requires as much "blind" or instrument flying as would be expected of a chair-boy on the Atlantic City Boardwalk on a sunny afternoon in June.

The erroneous picture of fog endangering the lives of air passengers in the East has been painted so vividly in the past by a few uninformed writers that the mere mention of Pennsylvania and fog conveys the thought of giant passenger planes racing blindly and wildly through heavy haze, the ground blotting out, no place to land, and with death riding on the wing tips ready to strike at any minute.

Air transport figures and a survey of conditions along the airways explode these conceptions of conditions as mere fallacies. There never has been a passenger death on either of the three air transport systems that daily have planes traversing the mountains with human cargo. Not one passenger has been injured in the same territory, and thousands have made the trip over the three lines since they were established.

Rise of Misconception

The mountains of the East are no more dangerous to air transportation than those in the West; in fact, they really are less dangerous because they are only about a third as high. Planes on the regular airways crossing Pennsylvania need only fly at a little above 2,500 feet to clear the hills, while planes crossing the Rockies must get up 8,000 feet. There have been a few accidents in the West, but one rarely hears of the dangers of flying out there, while from time to time stories come bobbing out of nowhere about "Hell's Stretch" and the spell it holds over aviation.

"Hell's Stretch," a phrase invented by some writer in the early days of aviation, has become about as hackneyed as "torch murder." It has come to mean any section of the Pennsylvania mountains traversed by aircraft. In the early days of aviation it might have been just what the name signified, but today the mountainous country, with its emergency landing fields, its twenty-four hour weather reporting service and its radio service to the planes, has become just another section of the nation's network of airways.

Passengers on planes flying across Pennsylvania will ask the copilots and mates to point out the section of the country called "Hell's Stretch."

When told it means any part of the mountain country, they are at a loss to understand, for they find landing fields within easy gliding range from every point along the system.

All the talk about blind or instrument flying has the public's mind muddled with thoughts of passenger planes roaring through haze as thick as pea soup. This is entirely wrong. Passenger planes do not fly in fog. Department of Commerce regulations prohibit flying of passenger planes when the visibility has reached the state where the pilot cannot see where he is going. The two-way radio and the weather reporting service throughout the Pennsylvania mountains insures pilots of advance knowledge of conditions so that they can land at one of the airports to avoid better conditions before proceeding.

Transports Grounded by Fog

Talk of planes racing through the air blindly, is tommyrot. Talk of fog rolling into the Pennsylvania mountains from nowhere is the bunk, and as for the hazard of flying these mountains they are much less dangerous than a crossing of the English Channel in a land machine, and nearly every American tourist who can afford the trip does so while abroad.

The only pilots who do any "blind" flying along the three skyways are equipped with instruments for flying the mail flyers. Their planes are without sight of the ground and they have the two-way radio to inform them of conditions ahead. Several of these veteran mail pilots have crashed into mountains, and others have escaped with their parachutes when something or other happened to their machines. In most of the cases snow, or ice on the wings, caused the forced descent.

Rarely do pilots on the regular air transports ever get their wings into the haze although they at times will pass over a valley that has been fogged in. When they do, they know what the condition is ahead, and they fly at altitudes high enough to take care of any emergency.

The three lines operating regularly across the Pennsylvania mountains are United Air Lines, operating between this city and the West by way of Bellefonte and Cleveland; Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc., between New York and the West by way of Pittsburgh and Columbus; and Pennsylvania Airlines, between Washington and Buffalo, by way of Pittsburgh.

Col. Lindbergh's Opinion

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, who as technical adviser for the Transcontinental line recently discussed mountain flying with the writer, said that in his opinion "the mountains in the East are no more of a handicap to flying than those in the West."

Fog, however, is a problem to aviation because it forces the planes to cancel flights, thereby depriving the air lines of much-needed revenue, but it is not a hazard to air transportation because the passenger planes are ordered to land whenever conditions are not ideal for safe and sane flying.

Aviation has made rapid strides during the last few years, and today instruments are under development which eventually will take all the human element out of flying in the near future planes will be flying through the haze and fog with human cargoes, but until these instruments are perfected and have been tried out thoroughly, passenger planes will fly only in clear weather.

When the passenger airplane first was introduced to Pennsylvania, the natives of that State said it never would work. They shuddered at the idea of planes racing across the tops of the mountains, some of which never had been climbed.

When Plane Was Novelty

When Major Victor E. Bertrando landed at New Martinsville, W. Va., in 1925 with a Douglas plane carrying six passengers and a copilot, the natives came from far and wide to look over the big bird—it was a big one then—and almost without exception those who talked with the persons in the plane said that it was folly to think of operating passenger planes over those Pennsylvania hills.

Even the Pennsylvania Railroad was rather doubtful about the practice of flying passengers over train service between New York and Columbus would always be a feeder for the coast-to-coast line, but after several years the plane service finally was extended until now the company has planes competing with the fastest trains over the same territory. Lighting of the airways by the Department of Commerce has played a big part in this eastern service, for now planes cross the mountains with passengers by night as well as by day.

Movie-makers go merrily on, juggling casts and crossing up the columnists.

Chester Morris, it now develops, will play opposite Carole Lombard in "The Beach Comber," thus leaving Phillips Holmes free to resume his interrupted vacation.

Several days ago, Phil was hastily summoned from New York. They were in such a hurry he had to fly to make an added scene for the Lubitsch picture, "The Man I Killed." When he got out here, it turned out to be a single close-up, ironically enough, a smile.

Then, when they announced him for "The Beach Comber," his dreams of further loafing faded away completely.

But on second thought, the studio decided Chester Morris would fit better into the Mildred Cram story, so everybody is happy. Chester has a good role and Phil can devote himself to leisure.

Incidentally, Paramount also is going to change the title of this picture. William De Mille directs.

THAT STUMPED HIM.
Grover Jones will know better next time than to pick on his old man. Grover writes scenarios for Paramount, and so he knows all about words.

His old man knows plenty about electricity, but is a little off on spelling. The other night, Grover pointed out several mistakes in a letter his father had written.

"If you don't know how to spell a word, Dad," he chided, "why don't you look it up in the dictionary?"

Grover's old man grinned. "If I don't know how to spell 'em in the first place," he asked slyly, "how am I going to know where to look for them?"

RACKETEER EMBARRASSED.
In this community of many rackets, at least one fake promoter is hiding his blushes.

The other day a young man sidled into the office of Tremm Carr, producer of Westerns, and offered to fix it so Tremm could sign up Bob Steele, the cowboy star. The man claimed he had an option on Steele's services for a year.

Tremm smiled grimly. "That's funny," he said, "I happen to have an option on Steele's services myself."

The fake promoter gulped and thought desperately. "Are you sure?" he finally managed to ask. "Yep," said Tremm, "I pay Steele $500 a week every week just to be sure."

And the racketeer knocked over a chair, making his exit.

SOME CHOICE BITS FROM WORLD'S GOSSIP CAPITAL

Two local matinee-goers sat next to Greta Garbo during a whole performance of "Grand Hotel," and they didn't even know it. Greta (Gussie Berger to Broadway) slipped into the Belasco Theatre and gave her absorbed attention to the stage presentation of her new picture. The whole cast of the film are spending much time at the Belasco, and Director Edmund Goulding has seen the play many times. Richard Bennett is talking over a long-term contract with Paramount which will put him into the big money. . . . And out it M-G-M. it looks as if Victor Schertzinger will sign to direct Jack Gilbert in "Candle-Light." If the deal goes through, he will return to the scene of his first directorial efforts. Back in the days when the old Triangle studio occupied the site of M-G-M's modern Cinema City, Vic was putting Will Rogers through his paces. . . . Ian Keith Edwin Booth in his dressing room. The other day a local paper reported it as Edwin a Booth, and Ian is busy explaining. . . . Another Hollywood landmark has disappeared. Passing by what used to be Poverty Row, I noticed today that the famous "Mourners' Bench" in front of the drugstore has been removed. Itinerant actors and film cowboys used to spend many an hour on this bench, waiting for calls from across the street. . . . Lila Lee reports an ex-cameraman and a former studio makeup artist are running an awning-and-tent rental business in Papete.

Apparently, there's to be another epidemic of South Sea film stories. Radio is sending a company to Hawaii to make "The Bird of Paradise," and now Fox has bought A. C. Kennedy's story, "After the Rain." It is about the adventures of a young married couple who come up against the undermining influences of the tropics. Sally Eilers and Spencer Tracy will be featured.

Connoisseurs Disagree On Yardstick of Beauty

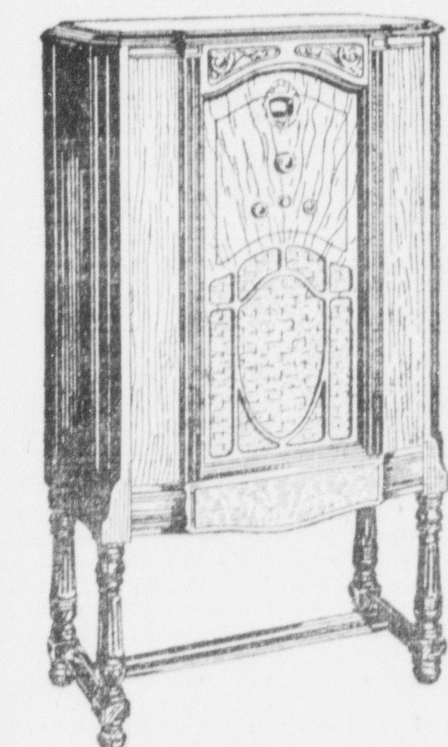

Solons of Pulchritude Enumerate Qualifications
Required for Glorification in Famous Stage Productions.

ZIEGFELD'S CHOICE WHITE'S SPECIFICATIONS

Though New York's three great connoisseurs of feminine loveliness disagree on their precepts of beauty, they all see eye to eye in one respect, which is that perfect legs are essential. Florenz Ziegfeld, impresario of the famous Follies, not only demands candidates for glorification be in possession of a perfect physique and face to match, but also insists on personality. Perhaps it is this last attribute that is responsible for so many of Mr. Ziegfeld's graduates marrying into the millionaire class. George White, producer of the "Scandals," which are not as naughty as the name implies, is not too insistent on physical perfection, but he demands that his showgirls have "charm." But for all his protestations, White has never featured a bevy of scrawny, knock-kneed women in any of his shows. The third solon of pulchritude is Earl Carroll, whose "Vanities" have made him famous. Carroll has a rigid standard of beauty. He demands perfection in form and face and does not care anything about charm, magnetism or brains. He is also a believer in beauty unadorned, a fact that has caused him no little inconvenience, certain minions of officialdom not seeing the matter from Carroll's viewpoint. Photo-diagrams above provide a good beauty yardstick by two of the foremost glorifiers of the American girl.

Suit of Dorothy Knapp, Former "Miss America" Glorified by Earl Carroll, Against Wealthy "Angel" Turns Out a Damp Squib.

MRS. FREDERICK C. PENFIELD

Wearer of the proud title, "Miss America," a few years ago Dorothy Knapp, beautiful showgirl, is today seriously contemplating taking the veil and spending the rest of her life in cloistered seclusion far away from the world, the flesh and Earl Carroll. When Miss Knapp was "knocking 'em dead," at a time when she was on the pinnacle of pulchritude, Earl, the Knight of the Bath, brought her to Broadway and built her up as a foalight favorite, climaxing her climb to fame with a stellar role in his musical comedy production, "Florieta." It happened that this show was "angel" (financed to you) by the wealthy Mrs. Frederic Courtland Penfield, who makes a hobby of using her millions to dabble in such things. Life was just a bowl of strawberries for Dorothy until Mrs. Penfield saw the show one evening. Then came the raspberries, for the wealthy "angel" ordered the noble Earl to dismiss the prize Venus. The result was a law suit against Mrs. Penfield by Dot, charging breach of contract and asking $500,000. But Dorothy's tears, instead of helping her with the jury, merely ruined her make-up. Furthermore, in a moment of absent-mindedness, she had declared that she had not received her $1,000 salary check for the last three weeks she worked for Carroll. It required the cashier of the bank to jog her memory into an admission that she had been mistaken. It was then that the judge informed Dot that the highest valuation he could put on her claim was 6 cents.

CURVES OF YOUTH IN NEW STYLES TEND TO BEAUTIFY WEARERS

By ALICE LANGELLIER
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
PARIS—Simple youthfulness is the note stressed by the best French designers this spring.

Gone are the fussy frills and fur-bowls which loomed dangerously on the fashion horizon this past autumn and winter. New clothes are neat, practical and cunning in cut, all the means feminine, following the natural curves and tending to beautify all while remaining romantic, and this women.

Nearly all the fashion-makers seem to be agreed on the general lines of the silhouette. One of them is tight-fitting, the other a little looser, both easier to wear than those of last year. A slightly high moulded waistline is to be seen at several houses and others stress a modified princess line.

Philippe et Gatton are presenting a slightly wider shoulder effect by the use of the deep V-shaped incrustations at the back, by short puffed sleeves or triangular points that merge toward the shoulders. All this helps to make the waist look slim.

Yvonne Carotte shows a particularly youthful skirt with flat or straight back breadth and the front swinging outward on the circular or bias.

Paton puts the emphasis on the waistline to just short of an Empire diagonal line this year and raises the effect.

STRAWS FOR SPRING ARE MOSTLY SMALL; FEW HAVE BRIMS

By Alice Langellier
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PARIS—The straws have come back for spring days and sunshine but from the size of the first ones now seen at smart modistes on the Boulevards they are not going to do very much protecting.

Women appear to have definitely made up their minds not to wear large hats any more, not even in summer, but a few of the hat-makers are nevertheless showing brims on their mid-summer models.

There are some lovely new speckled straws very light in weight and Camille Roger strikes a novel note

"BUD" MCGINLEY LEADS TEAM TO VICTORY

Snapping out of the flax that has been following him since he entered the A. O. H. Basketball League, "Bud" McGinley, versatile guard of the Columbian aggregation, led his team to a 35-20 victory over the Celtics last night on the Hibernians' floor.

"Bud" was the big gun in the affair, hitting the cords for five double-deckers and three fouls for a total of thirteen points. But this was not all as his defensive playing stood out a little higher than his scoring for all he did was to shut out "Mush" Brady, scoring ace for the Celtics, without a field goal, although the latter did manage to score two fouls.

McGinley was formerly connected with the Philadelphia Indemnity quintet in the Philadelphia Insurance League but gave up that position to play his post with the Columbian five. Since entering the local league he has not been doing so well and finally struck his stride last night.

"Jimmy" Dolans' Gaels increased their lead to a point where they will have no trouble in winning the second half when they downed the Shamrocks in the night-cap. The final score stood: Gaels, 31; Shamrocks, 26.

The game was fast and not very many time-outs were called. The Gaels held the edge throughout, but could not let up because the "Shams" were always threatening.

"Jimmy" Nealis led the losers in scoring with three twin-pointers and five free shots for a total of eleven points. "Eddie" Roe, as usual, was high man for the winner with thirteen tallies, six field goals and one gift shot.

Gibbons Quit Radio When He Smelled Powder

both the regulars and the irregulars. He encountered the leading "white Russians," exiles from the Soviet Union, waiting an opportunity to join any movement which might eventually shake the hold of the Bolsheviks on their country.

With the Manchurian situation stabilized, after the Japanese had overrun practically all the territory, Gibbons had a hunch to go to Shanghai. His intuition proved correct. The Japanese fleet only beat him to the bund by a few hours. He was present when the first Japanese airplanes started their bombing operations against Chapei.

His dispatches from Shanghai have electrified the country. In crisp, snappy, descriptive bursts, like machine gun fire, Gibbons has pictured the situation there, the apprehension of the International Settlement, where the foreign colonies are congregated, congested with Chinese refugees seeking a haven from the rain of explosives from the heavens.

Heavy fighting by infantry and artillery against the Chinese positions, and the defenders' desperate defense to hold back the Japanese, have been described. He has told of the horrors to the civilian population, and the cruelties and suffering which the ruthless exigencies of warfare entail.

And he has sought after American interests and told how they were protected, damaged or jeopardized in the military operations.

Journalistically speaking, Shanghai has been a one-man job. And the man who has done it is Floyd Gibbons, for the International News Service.

China Air Chief Is Bert Hall, of Kentucky

Force where he fought for 100 a day. He lined up with the opposing Bulgarians but shortly afterwards was captured by the Turks. He was sentenced to death but escaped by bribing his jailers.

Hall escaped from the Turks in time to serve in the World War where he bagged twenty German planes. He was credited officially only with nine. After the war he was caught in the maelstrom of the Russian Revolution but again escaped to France with his wife and with the wife of a Russian general. He helped her smuggle a fortune in jewels out of Russia.

In 1929 Hall went to China to teach flying and assumed the name of Chang. He blithely switched from one factional allegiance to another, deserting the Nanking forces for the Cantonese government, and now again is lost in war clouds. In jumping from the Nanking army to the Cantonese, Hall took seven of the best Nanking flyers and their planes with him.

Hall planned a trans-Pacific flight in 1928 but the venture did not materialize.

Mellon Will Not Be Delegate To Republican Convention

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 19.—(INS)—Andrew W. Mellon, ambassador to Great Britain, will not go to the Republican National Convention in Chicago as a delegate-at-large from Pennsylvania, the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph said in a story published today.

Before he leaves for the Court of St. James's, in about three weeks, Mr. Mellon will announce his withdrawal as a candidate for delegate, Mark Shields, political editor of the Sun-Telegraph, said in his article. The former secretary of the treasury, the Sun-Telegraph said, was slated for delegate in a conference between state Republican chairman, Edward Martin, and leaders of the Philadelphia organization.

"Mr. Mellon is understood to have said," according to Shields' story, "that his duties in London will be just reaching the peak of their importance of the date set for the convention and that it would be prejudicial to important financial adjustments which will be under consideration by the United States, England, France and Italy for him to return to this country at that time."

"Rather than retain the delegate-ship under those conditions, which would leave his alternate to serve in his stead, Mr. Mellon has decided to step aside prior to the primary . . . It was his own suggestion that another man be slated in his place . . . and it is possible the nomination may be kept in the Mellon family, one state leader having suggested . . . the place be offered to W. L. Mellon, nephew of the ambassador and former Republican State Chairman."

"The fact that A. W. Mellon will remain in England cannot, by the farthest stretch of the imagination, be laid to any coolness between himself and President Hoover, no matter what the circumstances under which the Secretary withdrew from the Treasury and accepted an appointment to the diplomatic corps."

Grand Jury Advocates Enlarged Court House

Enlargement or alteration of the Bucks County Court House as early as possible to relieve the overcrowded conditions of the various offices, was recommended by the Grand Jury of the county in the report submitted for the February term of criminal court.

The report was signed by Louis R. Kenderdine, of Newtown, as foreman, and Mrs. Starling B. Conroy, of Doylestown, clerk. The high-lights of the report are as follows:

"After making an inspection of the Court House buildings and grounds we find that there are many departmental offices crowded for space in which to properly and efficiently perform the duties of the respective offices. The Grand Jury particularly found this to be true in the office of the Recorder of Deeds, the Sheriff's office, office of the Clerk of Quarter Sessions, County Treasurer and others.

"The Grand Jury strongly recommends that the present Court House building either be enlarged or alterations made to take care of the overcrowded conditions in which the various offices are functioning. This is to be done as early as possible."

Thirty-nine bills of indictment were placed before the Grand Jury, of which thirty-four were returned true bills and five not true bills.

The County Prison was visited and found to be in excellent condition, particular mention being made in the report of the unusually fine supervision of that institution.

Likewise, a visit was made to the County Home, where the Grand Jury reported conditions to be very satisfactory. The cattle and dairy barns especially, were found to be in excellent condition.
